

THE APPLIED HUMAN AT WORK

THE WORLD OF THE WORKER IN THE DIGITAL ERA

DATE AND LOCATION

London (UK)

June 26th , 2019

Every human being who works for a living in business or any organisation today is affected by technology which now touches every aspect of their working lives almost every minute of the day, with profound implications for recruitment, retention, and productivity.

As we approach a time when AI and machine learning becomes even more integrated into the workplace, we are using this exclusive dinner event, to discuss...

- Technology's impact on humans at work and in society
- What workers in the digital era should do to ensure they can still thrive in the always-connected world of today
- And what organisations need to consider to keep their employees healthy and engaged in the workplace.

OUR SPEAKER

Julia Hobsbawm, the acclaimed expert on modern connectedness and its discontents and the Honorary Visiting Professor in Workplace Social Health at London's Cass Business School has interviewed several of the world's top People directors and academics concerned with productivity and the workplace to bring insight to this report, and in addition will publish the findings of an extensive attitudinal survey amongst key professionals into their working practices with technology.
